Using Laddering Research Techniques in the Classroom

David B. Klenosky, Purdue University
Steven M. Howell, Northern Illinois University

Teaching & Learning Fair - Case Studies (Other)
Teaching & Learning Fair Presentation
Abstract 2017-131
Friday, June 2, 2017
10:15 AM
Room: Sopris

An overview of an in-class case study assignment to demonstrate of the use of laddering as a tool for understanding motivations in different consumer contexts (e.g., participation/spectator sports). Presentation would involve linking underlying theory to practice, overviewing options for collecting laddering data, and pedagogical materials to lead an in-class exercise.