Abstract 2017-229                                                   Room: Sopris

The authors are investigating the use of virtual reality (VR) as a teaching tool. Integrating appropriate educational theory, the authors will present an assessment of low cost hardware, the development of instructional VR content and potential health issues when using VR. Demonstration of VR hardware and content will be available.
